Financial Services

2020 =

Market Trends

As the 4th largest provider of wholesale financial services in the EU, Ireland is a leading hub of financial excellence. The sector employs approximately 42,000 people and contributes €2.3bn each year in taxes, creating lucrative opportunities for finance professionals. The vision of the IDA's 'Ireland for Finance' strategy is for this number to reach 50,000 by 2025, meaning a strong future for Ireland's finance industry.

Funds & Asset Management

The funds sector continues to grow in Dublin, with interest from both domestic and international investment and €4.2 trillion worth of assets under administration. We have seen welcomed expansion outside of the IFSC with Northern Trust in Limerick, BNP and Fidelity in Galway, State Street in Kilkenny and Naas, Hedgeserv, Citco, Alter Domus in Cork, and Opus and Carne in Wexford. The funds and asset management markets are highly dynamic and it is going to be extremely competitive when engaging talent in 2020. Companies are focusing on candidates who can transition into new roles from different financial services backgrounds. To facilitate this, there has been increased investment in training and upskilling for new hires.

Mancos

A number of international investment and asset managers have set up management companies (mancos) in Dublin, with 97 new licenses being authorised by the central bank across various UCITS, AIFM, and MIFID firms on the back of Brexit. Front-office compliance and risk candidates are in particular demand to support this.

Third-party management companies have experienced significant growth in 2019 and firms including KB Associates,

 Figures based on financial services professionals who completed our survey. DMS, Carne and Bridge have all expanded, giving high-calibre funds services professionals the opportunity to move into a more dynamic area of the industry.

Banking

In the banking space, there has been extensive growth in corporate and investment with companies and international banks choosing to escalate their operations in Dublin. In 2017, Bank of America Merrill Lynch became the first major UK-based entity to select Dublin as its new base for EU operations. 29 financial services companies have relocated either people or services to Dublin from the UK, creating ample opportunities in the capital.

Candidates with APA or QFA qualifications are in high demand again for 2020. Business underwriters and credit analysts for the SME market also remain popular, which is a positive reflection on the current domestic demand for mortgages, motor and lending.

The Need to Upskill

The financial services market continues to flourish but technological advancements mean companies will have to focus on upskilling their people to stay relevant. The rise of industries like fintech and blockchain require new skills to stay competitive on a global scale, which may involve overseas recruitment strategies to leverage these skills.

Candidate Feedback

Having worked with Ben, I found him to be extremely professional, focused and with his client's best interests at heart. Ben wants the best for each individual he works with and will do his best to find you a role that suits your needs and skill set. I couldn't recommend him more highly – an absolute pleasure, Ben. Thank you.

Killian Cooney Vice President at SMT

Hugh was key to placing me in my new role at Amundi. Hugh brought the role to my attention and guided me through the process step by step. His understanding of the businesses in which he places candidates provided key insights during the interview process. I would highly recommend Hugh to anybody looking for the next step in their career.
